

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE.

THE preceding title-page indicates the nature of the present work and the design of its author. Except so far as is necessary for etymological purposes, words occurring in writers ordinarily read by less advanced students of the Latin language are, for the most part, alone explained; and in their treatment the principles upon which the larger Dictionary of White and Riddle is based are uniformly followed, as fully as circumstances allow or require. The course which has been pursued may be thus described. Immediately after the assigned origin of each word, the literal interpretation is given between parentheses; and that English rendering of which such interpretation holds good in a pre-eminent degree is placed first in order, and regarded as the proper or primary meaning. When the source of a word is not discoverable, the fact is stated; and the ordinary interpretation is accepted and assigned the first place. When figurative and metonymical powers exist, either separately or conjointly, these are given, when they fall within the necessarily restricted scope of the work. A brief reference is usually made to some author; invariably so, indeed, when a quotation is deemed desirable or needful. Peculiar or unusual grammatical constructions are noticed. In the case of adjectives and adverbs, the comparative and superlative degrees are mentioned when they are known to exist; and whenever either one or the other or both are omitted, it is to be considered that no authority is to be found for their use. Proper names are included in the body of the work, and will be found in their alphabetical order; added to which their meaning is stated, whenever their origin is clearly traceable or may be reasonably conjectured; such meaning being printed in Roman type in the case of Latinized Greek names, and in Italic type in the case of pure Latin names. French derivatives from such Latin words as are comprised in this Dictionary are, moreover, mentioned.

In one respect, however, this book differs from the parent work, and, indeed, from any Dictionary which has yet appeared. This peculiarity consists in the mode of printing each leading word so as to exhibit its process of formation, and thus show the reason for the etymological meaning assigned to

it. The plan was originally devised for, and carried out in, a work on the structure of the Latin language, entitled "Latin Suffixes," which was written for the special instruction of the boys of a particular department in a particular school. The success which attended its use has suggested the application of its principles in the present instance. Since, however, this mode of printing is a novelty in Lexicographical works, some explanation of the plan itself is required.

SIMPLE WORDS consist, in part, of a base, which may be either a root, or a theme—by some called a stem; in part, of either a suffix alone or a suffix preceded by a connecting vowel or by a consonant, which some etymologists term "euphonic," others "epenthetic." In order, as before stated, to show the formation of the word, and at the same time to assist in indicating the etymological force resulting from the combination of the base and suffix, a hyphen is placed between them. Thus, in am-or, ama-tor, and vir-tus, the respective bases are am, ama, and vir; the respective suffixes are or, tor, and tus. Again, in teg-timen, mon-itor, and mon-strum, the respective bases are teg and mon; timen and itor supply instances of the occurrence of a connecting vowel; while strum shows the employment of the euphonic or epenthetic consonant between the suffix and base; the connecting vowels being respectively u and i; the euphonic or epenthetic consonant, s; the suffixes, men, tor, and trum. In some few cases a seeming prefix is employed: see the articles a-pi-s, a-vi-s.

COMPOUND WORDS are formed sometimes by the union of two simple words, either without or with some letter-change or contraction; at other times by the combination of the primary elements entering into the formation of two (rarely more) simple words, either with or without a connecting vowel, and generally with, though occasionally without, a suffix; while, further still, a euphonic or epenthetic consonant is inserted in certain instances.

Of the former of these two classes of compound words, ab-solvo, per-rumpo, con-scendo, are examples. In order to distinguish the component parts, a hyphen is inserted between them. If the composition involves no letter-change, the word is simply printed as shown in ab-solvo, per-rumpo. But if a letter-change occurs, then mention is made of the fact, while the same mode of printing is retained. Thus, that con-scendo is a compound word, appears from the employment of the hyphen, while the change that is made in one of its members is mentioned immediately after the statement of its mode of flexion and of its conjugation, in the following way;—[for con-scando]; con-scendo being in fact the euphonised form of con-scando. Examples of the formation of compound words from two simple words, through contractions, are found in ne-mo from ne-homo, and in n-olo from nè-volo.

Of the other class of compound words, lat-t-fic-o, and mont-t-côl-a, exhibit the employment of a connecting vowel and the addition of a suffix. Puer-për-us and con-sanguin-ûs are formed without an intervening connecting vowel, while they each receive a suffix. In tad-t-fer and tub-t-cen, there is a connecting vowel, but no suffix. While, as will be presently shown, equ-e-s and com-e-s receive a euphonic or epenthetic consonant, though it does not appear in their nominative cases. Here, too, as in the other class of compound words, hyphens are employed to separate the component parts. In that portion of each article which is devoted to etymological information, the respective roots or themes of the simple words are shown by their being separated by a hyphen from the part changed in flexion; the connecting vowel or euphonic (otherwise epenthetic) consonant is denoted by its being placed between parentheses (); while, further still, any letter-changes that may occur are stated.

By reference to the body of the work it will be seen that lat-t-fic-o is for lat-t-fîc-o. Here lat is the theme of lat-us; fac is the root of fac-io; i, as will be seen from its mode of printing—viz. (i),—is a connecting vowel; while the o is a verbal suffix. So also in the case of mont-t-côl-a, it will be seen that mont is the true theme of mons—the t disappearing, be it observed, in the nominative before the following consonant, s; that col is the root of col-o; that i is a connecting vowel; while the final a is a suffix. Here it should be stated, that where the true theme of a noun is not discoverable in the nominative case, the genitive is given, as there it always appears: e. g. mons, mont-is.

On the other hand, in puer-për-us, puer the theme of puer, puer-i, is connected immediately with për, which is altered from par, the root of par-io; while the final syllable us is a suffix. In con-sanguin-ûs, con,—the form assumed in certain cases by cum when used in composition,—is joined immediately to sanguin, which is the theme of sanguis, the n being thrown out before the following consonant s; while ûs is a suffix.

Again. Tad-t-fer and tub-t-cen respectively supply instances of words having a connecting vowel, but being without a suffix. Thus, tad is the theme of tad-a; fer is the root of fer-o; i is a connecting vowel. So, tub is the theme of tub-a; cen represents can, the root of can-o; while i is a connecting vowel.

It has also been mentioned that a euphonic or epenthetic consonant is occasionally inserted. The articles com-e-s and equ-e-s will show this. Com-e-s, it is stated in the work itself, is put for com-i(t)-s, and equ-e-s for equ-i-(t)-s. In each instance the t does not appear in the nominative case; but it does appear in the oblique cases, and throughout the plural number; e. g. com-i-t-is, equ-i-t-is, etc. To indicate the nature of the letter t, it is printed, as shown above, between parentheses; viz. (t). It should be stated, however, that by some scholars this t is considered to be a suffix.

To pass now to some few other points which require mention.

Words, whether simple or compound, formed in the way above described, are often the sources of a still further formation. When this is the case, that portion of them which is not subject to flexion becomes the base of the new word, and is not divided into its original elements, but is printed continuously. To illustrate this by reference to words already used as examples. From mon-strum, con-scendo, are obtained, by the addition of suffixes, monstr-ōsus, conscen-sio (for conscend-sto): the bases being monstr, conscend, which are those portions of their respective words which are not subject to flexion; and the suffixes being osus, sio.

Words obtained directly from the Greek language, and which are in fact merely Latin representatives of Greek forms, are printed without any division: as, machina from μηχανή; Mennon from Μένων. Words, also, of doubtful origin are not divided.

When a consonant is inserted in the present tense of a verb in order to strengthen the present form, such consonant is inclosed, in the leading word, between parentheses: as, ju(n)g-o, ru(m)p-o; the true roots of which are respectively jug and rup.

When words are formed from verbs of the first conjugation, and receive the conjugational letter a, such a, when their origin is stated, is exhibited between parentheses; thus ama-tor, ara-trum, are said to spring from am(a)-o, ar(a)-o. But when the a is not employed, the ordinary form of the first person of the present tense of the verb is given; thus am-or, ar-vus are represented as having their sources in am-o, ar-o.

When a word has for its base the uninflected portion of a substantive of the second declension, or of an adjective following the form of the second declension, and such base ends in two, or more, consonants, a vowel is at times inserted before the last of them; as from minister, ministr-i, is formed ministr-tum, not ministrium; from tignum, tign-i, comes tigil-lum (for tigin-lum), not tign-lum; and from intēger, integr-i, is obtained integel-lus (for integer-lus), not integr-lus. The same statement also holds good in some other cases; as from umbra, umbr-a of the first declension, springs umbel-la (for umbor-la), not umbr-la.

Some suffixes are simple, as or in am-or; others are compound as tus in vir-tus, which represents tut-s, the real or pure suffix being tut, and s the nominative case-ending. This, however, is a point which cannot be treated of at length in a preface.

When a suffix is preceded by a connecting vowel, or by a euphonic or epenthetic consonant, no hyphen is employed; as mon-itor, not mon-i-tor; mon-strum, not mon-s-trum.

As the suffix always forms the last portion of a word, and follows the hyphen in simple words and the last hyphen in compound words, it has not been thought necessary to repeat in any instance what it is, inasmuch as it is self-evident. Where no suffix is used, the fact will appear in the statement given of the origin of the word.

Such is the outline of the plan upon which the leading words in this work are printed; a plan which, it is confidently believed, will go far to render an acquaintance with the mode of formation, and the etymological meaning, of words in general, comparatively easy even to persons beginning to study the Latin language. Should further insight into these matters be desired, it may be obtained from the work already mentioned—"Latin Suffixes." Much, also, will soon be procurable from the forthcoming "Public Schools Latin Grammar," especially with regard to letter-changes, and the construction of the cases of nouns and of the perfect tenses and the supines of verbs. From an examination of that work, which has been courteously conceded to the author of this Dictionary, in common with certain others engaged in educational pursuits, he is enabled to speak of the effort to harmonize grammatical teaching in this country as being, in his judgment, most skilfully carried out, and likely to be hailed as a great boon by all who can appreciate the advantages that cannot but accrue from the general adoption of one standard Grammar for the primary instruction of youth.

The assistance which the author received in his former and larger Abridgment of "White and Riddle's Dictionary" from the Rev. Ernest Brette—Graduate of the University of France, Head Master of the French School at Christ's Hospital, and French Examiner in the University of London and for the Civil Service of India—has been extended to him in the present instance also; that gentleman having kindly undertaken to test the accuracy of the printing of the French derivatives. For this service the author tenders him his very sincere thanks.

I. A, a, an, anect. or f., the first letter of the Latin alphabet: I. In compound words a long by nature generally remains unchanged; labor, delecto:—a short, or long merely by position, is changed either into short; tango, contingo: or, where it becomes long by position, into e; capio, concipio, conceptum:—sometimes it remains unchanged; amo, addamo; patera, impetrans. II. As an abbreviation A = Alnus: on voting-tablets (to denote the rejection of a proposed law) = antique: in trials = absolvo (hence called littera salutaria in Cic.): a.d. = ante diem: A.U.C. = anno urbis conditae.—As a numeral A = 500; Ā = 5000.

2. ā, interj., v. ah.
3. ā, v. ab.
āb (a, ab), prop. c. obl. [Sancrit, āb; Greek, ab] (Before vowels or h, ab is used: but before a consonant, a is mostly employed: yet some of the old writers use ab instead): I. A. Prop.: Of place: 1. Gen.: From: ab exercitu discedit, Cæsar; procul a terra, Cic.; funiculus a puppi religatus, id.—2. Esp.: With verbs of rest, to denote the side or direction from which an object is viewed: At, ea, is: cornix est ab læva, corvus ab dextera, Plaut.—B. Fig.: 1.: A. Gen.: From: a te diversus, Cic.: quartus ab Arceidæ, id.: principes a Corā, Liv.: id ab re regnum appellatum, id.: a periculo civem defendere, Cic.—B. Esp.: (a) To point out an agent: From, by means of: laudat ab his, Hor.: anima calescit a spiritu, Cic.—Ambiguity, however, arises when the verb in the Pass. requires ab in the active: a postulat a populo, (if the people demand it, might also mean, if it is required from (= of the people, Cic.).—(b) To denote a commencing point, etc.: From: a summo litore, to drink in succession from the one at the head of the table, Plaut.—(c) With words which denote fear, hope, etc.: From: on the part of: ei metui a Chryside, Ter.: spes a Romanis, Liv.—(d) Of taking vengeance: From: on: aliquid ab aliquo, Pl.—(e) Of knowing: From: by means of: cognoscere ab aliquo re, Cæsar.—(f) To define the respect in which a thing is to be understood: From: in relation to, in respect to, on the part of: a me pudica est, Plaut.—(g) In stating a motive: From: out of, on account of: absingulari amore, Cic.—(h) Instead of a Gen.: From: of: ab fontibus undæ, Virg.—(i) In stating a part: From: of: acuto ab novissimis uni militi detracto, Cæsar.—(k) In adverbial phrases: (a) Ab initio, a principio, a primo, From or in the beginning, at first: Cic.; Tac.; Plaut.—(β) A se, From one's self, i. e. of one's own accord, spontaneously: Cic.—(γ) Abarte, From art, i. e. skillfully, with art: Ov.—(m) To denote office, etc. (with or without servus): servus a pedibus, a footman, Cic.: a manu servus, a writer, amanuensis, Suet.—2. Sentire, facere, stare, esse ab aliquo, To feel, act, stand, or be on one's side, i. e. to belong to one's party, etc.: Plaut.: Cic.—Hence, to distinguish philosophical sects, Ull a Platone, those on the part or side of Plato, i. e. the Platonic philosophers, Cic.—3. Of time: a. From, after: a concione, Liv.—b. From, since: angustus a Romulo, Cic.: a puero, from a boy or boyhood, Ter.—4. (a) Sta. ab is separated from its case: a nullius tempore, Cic.—(b) Put after the word which it governs: quo ab, Plaut. II. In composition: A. Ab remains unchanged before vowels and most of the consonants. But, before c, g, and f, ab is used: as, abs-condo, abs-que, abs-tineo.—In such tenses, etc., of absum as begin with f in the simple form, both a and ab are found: as, a-fui and ab-fui.—Before m and v the form a is mostly used: as, a-movo, a-rervo.—Before p the form abs (sometimes shortened to as) is employed: as, abs-porto and as-porto.—B. Signification: 1. Prop.: a. From, away, away from: abduco.—b. From above, downwards, down: abundo.—2. Fig.: a. From, away: abalieno, wo. II.—b. In time: From: Aborigines.—c. To denote a departure or deviation from, also a reversal or negation of the force of the simple word: abnormis, abjungo.—3. Meton.: In an intensive force, or to denote completeness: abutor, wo. II. 4. In words denoting relationship ab marks the fourth degree from a person (not included): avunculus, abnepos.

Av-ona, m, f. Azona: a river of Gaul (now the Aime).

B, b, m. indet. or f. The second letter of the Latin alphabet, expressing the soft labial sound between m and p, corresponding to the Gr. beta (β, ϐ), and briefly expressed by be.—At the beginning of words b is found only in connection with the consonants l and r (in pure Latin words); but in the middle of them it is also connected with other liquid and feeble consonants.—Before hard consonants b is found only in compounds with ab, ob, and sub, where prepositions alone end in a labial sound; and these frequently rejected the labial, even when they were separated by the addition of an s, as abspello, obsperto pass into aspello, asporto; or the place of the labial is supplied by v, as in infero, anferio, for abfero, abferio. The Gr. β was represented by b; as, abis, Abeytus, abestinus, and obestinus = αβήτις, αβήτιος, αβήτιν, αβήτιον.—Also, b before s and t was changed into p, as scribo, scripsi, scripsimus; nubo, nupsimus, etc. Scilicet the grammarians, not rarely vary in these words between b and p.—Of the liquids, l and r stand both before and after b, but m (with one exception) only before it, and s only after it; hence, con and in before b always become com and im; just as inversely b before s is sometimes changed to m, as Scissimus for Subini- um; and scissimus for scobinum, whence the dimin. acabellum.—B is so readily joined with s, that not only acubus, arcubus, etc., were written for acubus, arcubus, etc., but also combustum was formed from taberna, and bubile was used for bovile, as also in dubius (= δοῦβος, dno) a b was inserted.—B is rejected in vro for vero, from vro, while it is retained in comburo and butum.—B is reduplicated in bibo, from the Gr. βίω, as the shortness of the first syllable in the preterite bibi, compared with debui and steti or stili, shows; although later bibo was treated as a primitive, and the supine bibulum formed from it.—Before b, m was sometimes inserted; e. g. in cumbo from civro, lumbo from lavro; inversely, it was rejected in subucus for subucus.—As in the middle, so at the beginning of words, b might take the place of any other labial; as, buxis for pyxis, balana for phalana, carbina for cerpalina, pubulus from populus, ambo for ambo. The interchange between labials, palatals, and linguals, as glans for βελανος, bilis for fel or holi, is rare at the beginning of words, but more freq. in the middle, as labro from ripes, uber from obfer, with which esp. the change of tribus Secwana into Suberrana deserves consideration.—Finally, the interchange of b with d at the beginning of words deserves special mention, as duonus for bonus; Bellona for Duellona; bellum for duellum, and bis from duis.

Bābe (pap-) = βαβαι or βαβαι, interj. denoting astonishment or joy: Wonderful! strange! Plant.

brated town of Mysia, on a neck of land in the Hellespont (now Chios).—Hence, Cyzicus, a um, adj. Of, or belonging to, Cyzicum.—As Subst.: Cyziceni, orum, m. (s. ec. civis) The inhabitants of Cyzicum.

D, d, s. indecl. or f. The fourth letter of the Latin alphabet: I. Corresponding in sound and place to the Greek Δ, but called simply De: having a harder pronunciation when closing a syllable or when followed or preceded by other consonants: whence the frequent and, in part, very old orthography ad (prep.). hausi, set,
agui, aiui, etc., appellari, afines, 163

dicere, etc., Alexander, Cassius, etc., for ad, hausi, sed, etc. II. As an initial,
the letter d, in pure Latin words, suffers only one vowel after it: the single consonantal compound dr is found only in borrowed words, such as drama, Drusus, Druides, etc., and in the two onomatopoeas, drum and drindio. Accordingly, the d of the initial dr, from du, was rejected, and the remaining v either retained unaltered, or was changed into b (so is bellum, bis, bonus, for duellum, dis, duonus).—As a medial, d, before most consonants, undergoes assimilation:

assum, ecce, quippiam, quicquam, for
adsum, idcirco, quidquam, quidquam, and in contractions like ecce from cedite.—D before s was suppressed altogether in grammatical inflection

as pes from ped-s; lapis from lapid-s; frons from frond-s; rasi from rad-s; rasi from rid-s; lusi from lud-s; clausi from claud-s (only the verb clausi assimilated in clausi); and in composition, when another consonant followed after the s, as ascendo, aspicio, astro, astro; also, in agnatus, agnatus, and agnatus the d yielded to the nasal pronunciation of the gn; and in latus to the concurrence of the s and t, because a combination st would be contrary to the laws of euphony, according to which no consonant can be doubled after another.—As a final, d stood only in ad, and in the instances cited below in no. IV. III. The letter d is interchanged: A. With t: mendax from mentior; quadraginta, quadra, etc., from quater.—B. With r: ars and ad; apor and aped; meritides and meritis; audis and auris.—C. With l: decima and lactima, dingua and lingua; and, on the contrary, olere for olere.—D. With s: Claudius, from the Sabine Clavus, medius and medus; and, on the contrary, ros and ros. IV. As a grammatical affirmative, d was used: A. In the oldest period of the language, to designate the Abel. Seg, and the adverb proceeding from it. For the origin of this d it is difficult to account.—B. The d which arose from the demonstrative de (in quidem, analogous to the c from ce, q. v.) was appended: 1. To the Acc. of personal pronouns ending in a vowel; so several times in Plautus and and ad. But in the classic age this d no longer appears.—2. To the neuter pronouns originally ending in a vowel, id (Gr. id), quid, quid (Gr. quid), istud, illud (from is-te, is-le), and alid, alid (Gr. alid).—3. In the older Latin attached to the particle ne = ne. And perhaps in like manner may be explained the forms pro and re for pro and re in the compounds prode, prodece, prodece; redare, redare, redare, redare, etc.; redde; and with epenthetic t in the anteclassic forms antides, antides, antides, for antes, antes, and antides; but postdes for postes appears to have been formed simply after the analogy of antides. V. As an abbreviation, D usually stands for the pronomen Decimus; also Dres, Divus, Dominus, Devis, etc. Before dates of letters, D signified decimus, and also dies; hence, a d. ante dies; in offerings to the gods, D. d., domo or donum dedit, D. d., dat., dedic., etc. 500. The designation of the number 500 by D does not properly belong to this place; because this is not the letter D (which would have denoted the number 10; cf. D. for the name Decimus); but the half of the original Tuscan numeral q or Q for 1000, which is like the letter D in shape.

E

1. E, e, indecl. a. or f.; the fifth letter of the Latin alphabet. I. The second of the vowel series, embracing both the e and the y of the Greeks. II. The short e (ē) is, in Latin, next to i the least emphatic of all the vowels. It took the place, A. Of a (especially before two consonants, whereas usually d passed into i in open syllables): refecto, confectio, for refallo, confarctio.—Sometimes the mode of spelling fluctuates, as in the compounds of spargo: aspergo and aspargeo; conspargo and conspargo; so also, together with disperdo the form dispergo also occurs.—This transposition likewise appears in verbal reduplications: ce-cidi, ce-cidi, pe-pigi, fr. cado, cano, pe(n)go.—B. Of i: 1. In the nomenclature of the adjectives in is: acre, agreste, facile, etc.—2. In the nominative forms edes, apes, canes, etc.: for edis, apis, canis, etc.—3. In the nominatives in es, whose genitive has is: pedes, pedis; eques, equis.—4. It is probable that the abl. e of the third declension proceeded from i (or ed.).—C. Of e or s: vortex, vortex, vester, from vorto, vortex, voster; auger for angur; and even for long u we have e in edipho and pepho, from jūro. III. The long ē (ē) interchangeably most freq. with the diphthongs æ and œ; yet it sometimes also took the place of æ, as in enāblo, from hālo

and in bilo for bālo; and in words borrowed from the Greek, as choræ, Dædus, along with Academia, Alexandria.

2. e, prep. = ex; v. ex. ed, v. is; eadem, v. idem. eape, v. ipse inel. ēa-tēnus, adv. (ed, Abl. of is; tenuis) Up to this or that point; so far: Cic.

G

G, g, indecl. n. or f. I. The seventh letter of the Latin alphabet, but which did not originally belong to the Latin orthography, its place being supplied by c. It was introduced about the time of the second Punic war. II. As an initial, g, in pure Latin words, enters into combination only with l and r; and therefore in words which, from their etymology, had the combination gn, the g was rejected in the classical age, and thus arose the classical xrmas natus, neco, etc., from the original gnatus, gnaeco, etc.: whereas in compounds the g again makes its appearance: cognatus, cogneco, etc. III. Commutation took place most freq. between g and c; v. the letter O:—with j in mejo from mingo, major from MAC (magis, maximus). IV. By assimilation, g was produced from b and d in oggero, suggero, aggero, etc., from ob-gero, sub-gero, ad-gero, etc. V. As an abbreviation, g sometimes denotes Gaius. Gābālī, drum, m. The Gabali; a
